Therefore, this wonderful, wonderful man has received the rich and golden inheritance and combined knowledge which has been handed down from father to son for generations.

While driving out Liberty street from Washington street at 8 o'clock last evening, Harry Campbell, who is employed in Page Bros' livery stable, collided with a team, which was driving up Hill street across Liberty street. In this team were William Inglis and Miss Eleanor Cole. Both were badly shaken up, and Miss Cole received a broken nose by being thrown against the wagon when the horse struck them.

The Barre Auto Club will open the season May 4 at 3 p. m., with its first regular shoot. The club has ordered a new McRae automobile trap, which will be installed about May 10. The new trap will throw the targets all at the same speed and height, which will make them far less difficult to break than under the old conditions. The DuPont trophy is up, beginning the first shoot; also four special prizes will be shot for under the handicap system. A large list of shooters is expected to contest for the prizes. Every member stands an equal chance of winning, as a liberal handicap will be given.

Owing to a misplaced switch in the Central Vermont yard, just south of the Granite street crossing, the 4:45 passenger train Saturday afternoon ran onto the freight depot siding and crashed into a line of cars. The train was running slowly and making the crossing at Granite street, when it struck the switch onto the siding, which leads to the freight depot. Engineer Farrell had just time to apply the brakes before the engine struck, and this lessened the force of the collision considerably. However, the impact was great enough to send the line of freight cars crashing into the bumper car at the end of the freight office. A box car was at the end of the line, and when it struck the post it was forced up and onto the top of the post two feet above its trucks which remained on the rails. The top of the car, as it was forced up, struck the eaves of the freight office building and smashed in a portion of the roof. The only damage done to the passenger train was the breaking of a draw-bar on one end of the smoking car. The sudden stop shook up the passengers, but no one was injured. The shifting line of freight cars and the box car was pulled off from the post down onto its trucks.
